ENGLIT 2325: Modernism, Periodicals, and Literary History [25116]

“Modernism began in the magazines,” critics have claimed. In this course, we will seek to understand international modernism through the media in which the movement was launched: “little” magazines like The Egoist, Poetry, and The Little Review, elite periodicals like The Criterion and Blast, mass-market journals like Scribner’s and Smart Set, and more. Drawing on the rich new resources available through collaborative efforts such as the Modernist Journals Project and the Modernist Magazines Project, we will explore a field presently undergoing large-scale shifts in conception and focus. We will use modernist magazines as means of approaching several interrelated questions: Through what material forms has the literary history of modernism been written, and why? How does the blend of commerce and aesthetics in periodicals reshape our notions of modernist praxis? What alternative narratives of the development of modernism, its canon, or its elements of gender, nationality, race, and worldliness might be suggested by a periodical archive? And what scholarly work remains to be done at the intersection of the fields of modernist criticism and the burgeoning periodical studies?

This course will proceed a bit differently than most. Each week, I’ll ask you to bring your laptop if you have one. We’ll do presentations, and prior to class, you’ll point your classmates to the issues on which you’ll focus in any particular journal. None of us will be able to read every magazine issue assigned on the syllabus in full, nor master the complete content of this course. Periodicals necessitate a different approach, and working out new methodologies, in a collaborative manner, will be one of our chief aims. I will also encourage you to explore your own interests—even selfishly—in this course, as most anything that you might be working on will surface in our archives in some form.

This course does not proceed chronologically, nor along the lines of national or literary affiliation. In the final weeks, we will shift from studying a single magazine or set of magazines, and instead will sample a cross-section of materials from certain “moments” in modernist history—famous or unknown.

Requirements: short contributions to CourseWeb site and annotations to our wiki, one or two presentations (depending on enrollment), regular participation, and a final paper (15-18 pp.) due via email by April 29

Required texts:

F. Scott Fitzgerald, The Great Gatsby (Scribner’s, 1925)

Michael North, Reading 1922 (Oxford, 2001)

An extensive list of recommended texts, references, and internet resources is posted on our CourseWeb site. We will add to this constantly during the semester.

Week 1: Introduction and overview

Week 2: Modernist Periodicals

Scholes and Wulfman, “How to Study a Modern Magazine,” in Modernism in the Magazines
MJP, How to Read a Magazine

Week 3: Poetry (Issues 1.1-2.2, 4.6, 6.3, 8.3, 13.6), from MJP website

Scholes and Wulfman, “Modernism’s Others: The Art of Advertising,” in Modernism in the Magazines
Marek, “Beginning in Chicago: Harriet Monroe, Alice Corbin Henderson, and Poetry,” in Women Editing Modernism

Week 4: The Freewoman (Issues 1.1-1.2) / The New Freewoman (Issues 1.1-1.5) / The Egoist (Issues 1.1-1.3, 1.16, 6.4, 6.5) (MJP)

Morrison, Introduction, in Public Face

Jean-Michel Rabaté, “The Freewoman, the New Freewoman, and the Egoist,” from Brooker/Thacker Vol. 1

Week 5: The Little Review (Issues 1.1-1.3, 1.6, 3.1, 3.6, 4.11, 4.12, 7.2, 9.2) (MJP)

Morrisson, “Youth in Public: The Little Review and Commercial Culture in Chicago,” in Public Face

Marek, “Making Their Ways: Women Editors of ‘Little’ Magazines,” from Women Editing Modernism

Week 6: The New Age (Issues 1.1, 1.5, 15.14, 24.2), English Review (Issues 1.1, 1.2, 2.8+supplement, 4.15)

Sean Latham, Introduction to Vol. I of The New Age

Morrisson, “The Myth of the Whole and Ford’s English Review,” from Public Face

Week 7: Scribner’s (Issues tbd by presenter in consultation with me) (MJP)

Scholes, “Afterword: Small Magazines, Large Ones, and Those In-Between”

Week 8: Crisis (Issues 1.1-1.6, 5.1, 8.4, 8.5) (MJP)

Week 9: Rhythm (Issues 1.1, 1.2, 2.5, 2.13,) / Blue Review (1.1), BLAST (1 & 2), Tyro (1) (MJP)

Morrisson, “Marketing British Modernism,” from Public Face

Week 10: The 1910 Collection (MJP)

[This week’s presenter will choose the critical readings with me based on her/his interests]

Week 11: 1922: Criterion (1.1, 1.2) and Dial (Oct. & Nov. 1922)

Michael North, Introduction to Reading 1922

Marek, “The Ironic ‘Editorial We’: Marianne Moore at the Dial,” from Women Editing Modernism

Week 13: Joyce, “Nausikaa,” from Little Review and from Ulysses

*Paul Vanderham, from James Joyce and Censorship

North, “Tourists in the Age of the World Picture,” from Reading 1922

Week 14: Fitzgerald, The Great Gatsby

The 1925 Virtual Newsstand

North, “Across the Great Divide,” from Reading 1922

Week 15: The Problem of World Literature, through Periodicals

*Eric Bulson, “Little Magazines, World Form,” from the Oxford Handbook of Global Modernisms

Presentation on Andrade and modern week in Brazil